We Communicate in Many Ways

Man needs, more than anything else, his fellow man. Intrapersonal relationships are the backbone and guts of any community. Gonzaga Prep is such a community, a place dedicated to imparting a somewhat unified body of knowledge as well as a sense of honor and of discipline to its students. Knowledge, discipline and honor are seldom taught. Knowledge can be as subtle as a friendship, or as straightforward as a textbook. Discipline is often as blunt as an athlete in training or as finely honed as a debater studying long after school is out. Honor can be as noisy as a fight in the parking lot after school or as quiet as the student who refuses to cheat even though it might mean the loss of a "crucial" grade. These are the things that we learn from each other as well as from the school. A yearbook can only attempt to examine the ways in which we learn the values that will follow us the rest of our lives.

Education is a "growing" kind of thing, where each time a new idea is received, the individual is changed in ways that are sometimes hardly noticeable and other times change his life completely. High School students are separated by the ideas which have been communicated to them over periods of time. Each grade of students is different. Each grade of students has its own classic forms of behavior and thought, as each begins to really see what makes society work and why, and where they fit in, if at all.

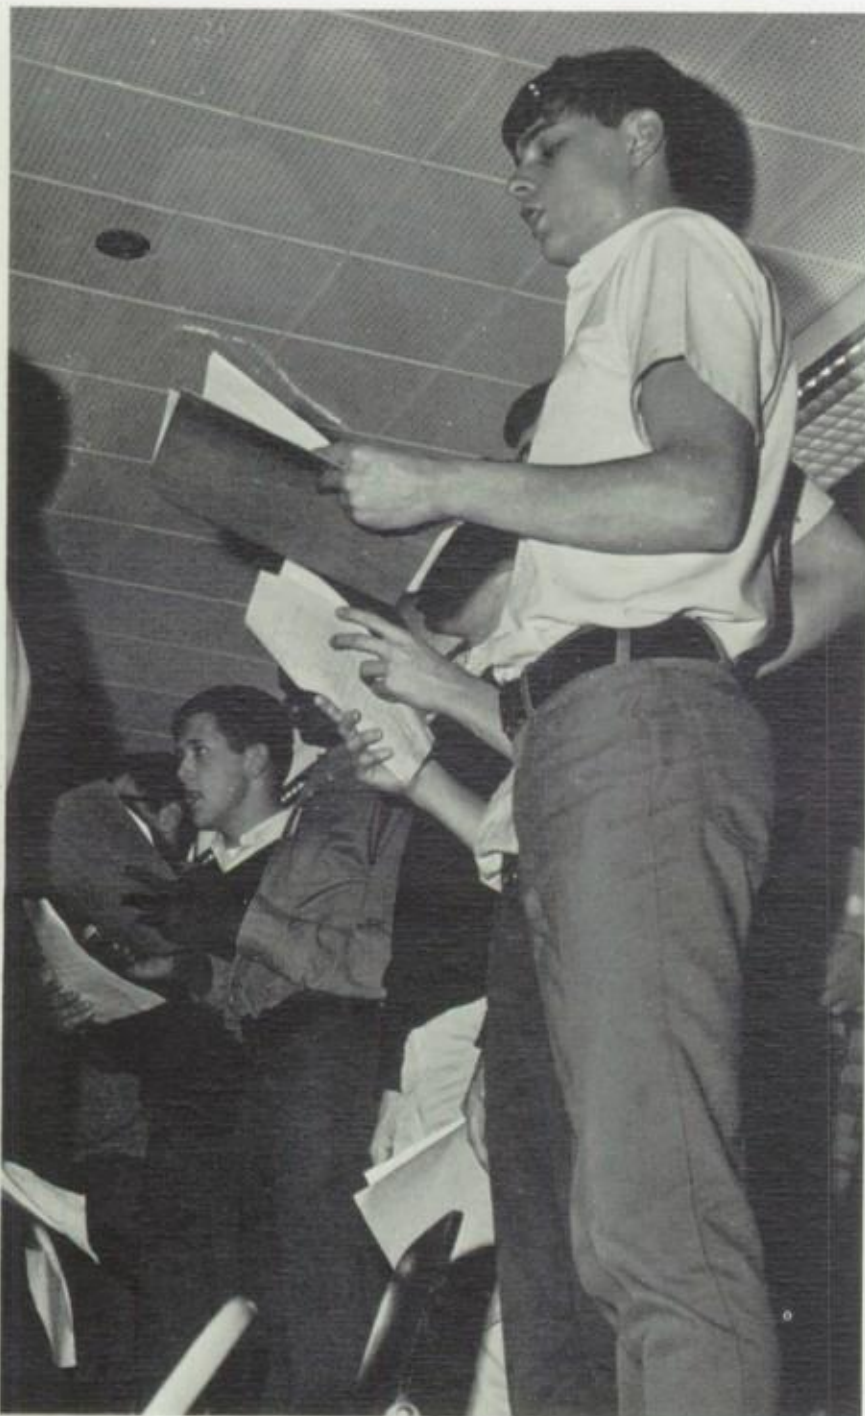

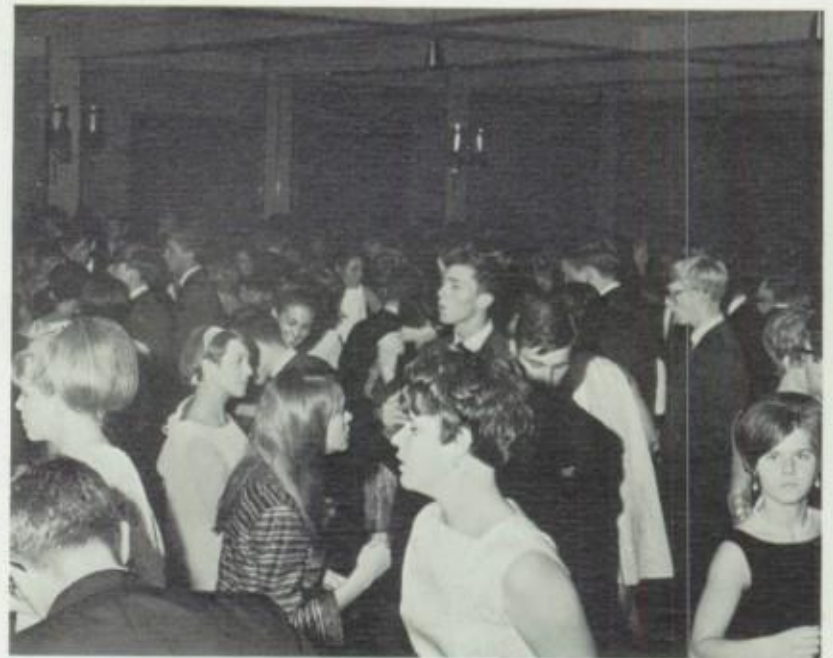

There was once a character in a novel who envied a man who had lost his memory because, he said, "The man who knows not who he is can be anyone." In many ways we are like the man without a memory. We have not a clear idea of our limitations and so we have the capacity to give ourselves completely to nearly anything or any cause. "Nothing is too difficult, nothing is too dangerous," we seem to say, "for us to try at least once." And sometimes we are right.

Finally, it is in High School that we begin to see value in people, not for what they do or seem to be, but because they are simply people. Gloriously, thinkingly, wondrously people. But some of us never make it. Some of us get caught in our own cynical, self-assured webs, while others stay continually in roles, being phony because it is easier than feeling. They are the ones who never learn to communicate. They are the ones who stand alone even in the largest of crowds.

The essence of education is learning to communicate, to actually "learn how to learn." And this is all that matters really, for we are all students, all of our lives.

FACULTY

ADS

The Seniors are the action class, They have come to the fullest understanding of the social systems of high school. They know the ropes, and will be fooled by little. They are witness to the fact that nothing remains the same for very long; what they were four years ago, or even four months ago, they are not now. This year of his life, perhaps more than any other year, communication challenges will confront the senior at every turn as he faces all the tests of manhood that an increasingly idea-orientated culture has set up.

Jim Blaine -- Class of 1967

What happens when communication breaks down totally between men, and what happens to the lives of those involved in the cartwheel-confusion of a crushing failure to communicate? Somewhere, within the death and funeral of Jim Blaine, lie the answers.

There is very little in war that is good or noble. The blunt cruelties and painful evils in men are allowed to show themselves, and at least it can be said that war brings out the worst and best in men. Jim Blaine was a man. Little more than pointless generality can be added to that. He died for an esoteric concept called freedom. He died as a result of causes that he himself probably did not understand.

It takes all the resources of our faith to see anything meaningful in his death, to see that there was meaning in the manner and circumstances of his departure. When men can no longer live together in peace and harmony, the Jim Blaine's are called to give their lives.

We weep that one of our number has left us; that part of the whole is now gone. But at the same time we learn. We learn the importance of achieving the goal we all have before us, the goal of learning to communicate with each other on every level of human existence.

Jim Blaine's funeral held in Prep gym, March 5, 1968

Activities

Education is not merely the process of recording facts. Education is a series of balanced, interpreted experiences; a series of activities as well as classes. Learning to communicate effectively within a group of people working together towards a conscious goal offers an opportunity to apply the things one learns in a classroom. Knowledge becomes life, and life, knowledge.

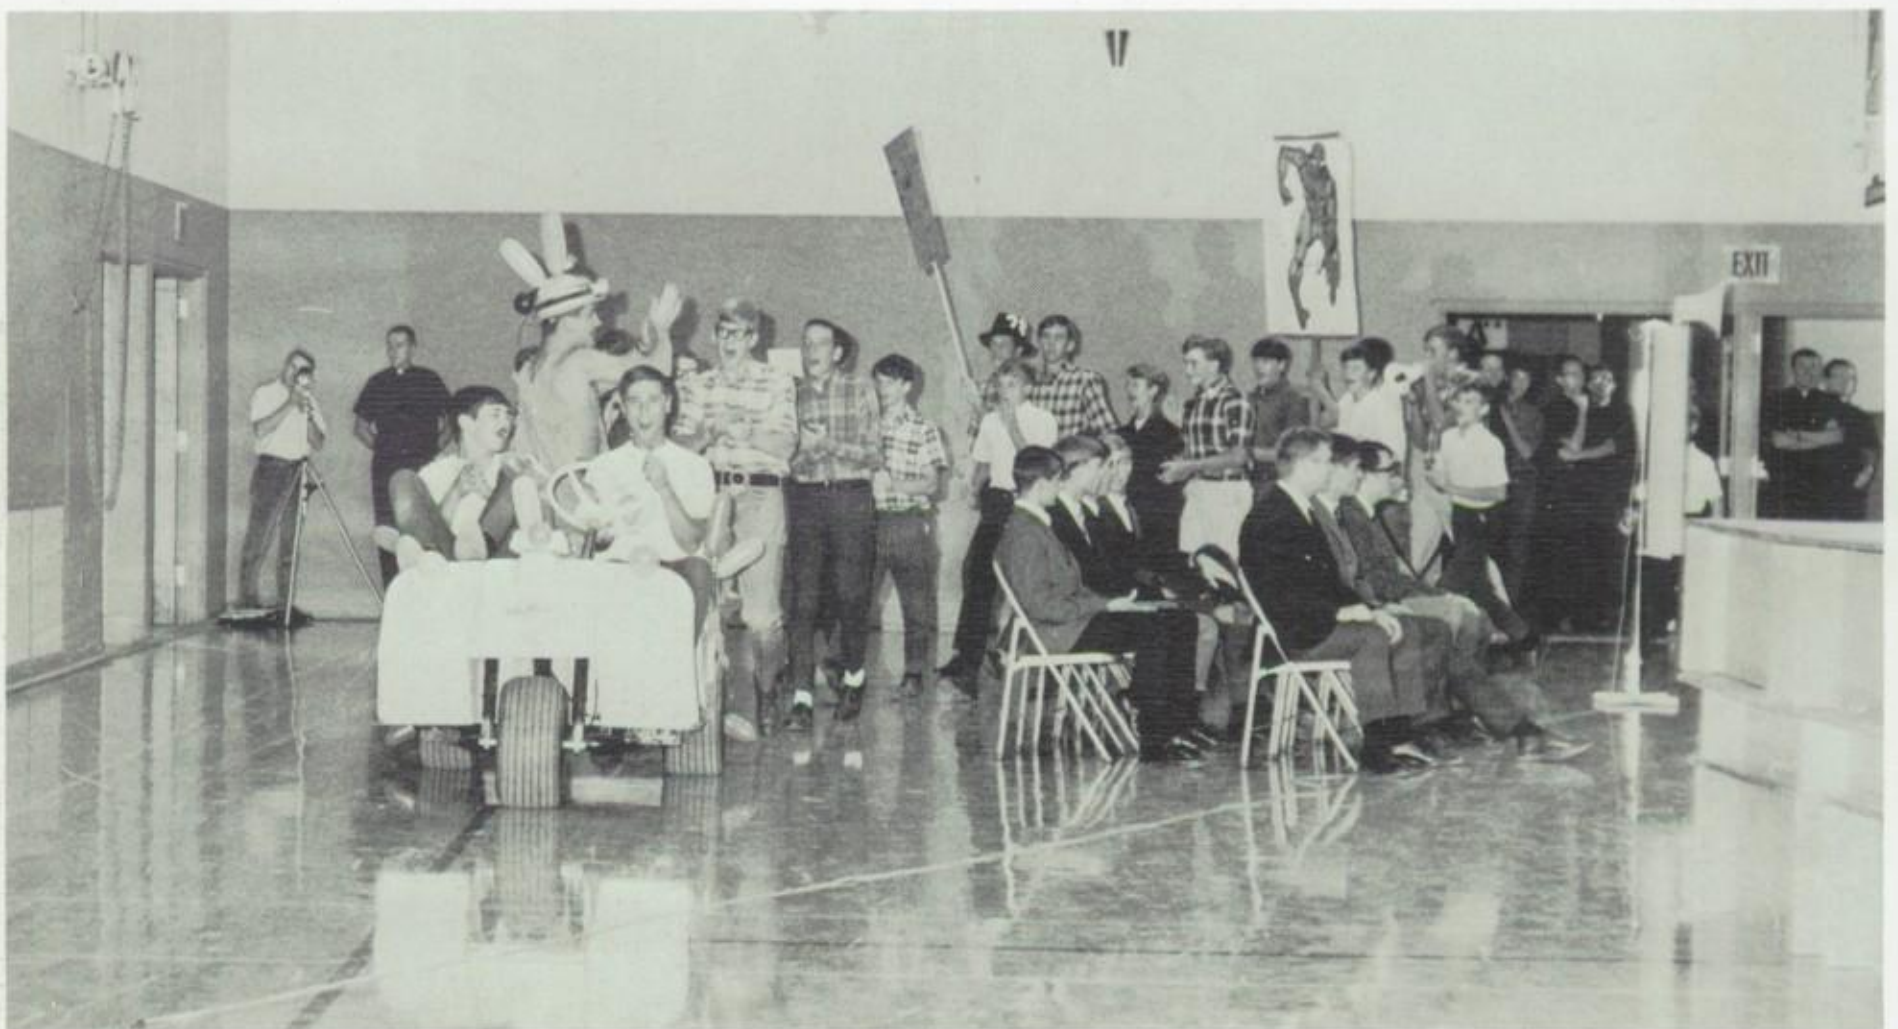

Convention

Nervous candidates await turns to speak.

President-elect Mike Marx.

Wild demonstration starts rolling.

Convention 1967 saw the student approach government with a serious attitude. Speeches reflected the growing responsibility of the students. The platforms for the elections were progressive and liberal platforms, advocating immediate legislation to help spirit and Gonzaga. Here "Zag Week" was first officially presented, and students were reminded that the accomplishments of the first semester would be the cornerstone of the second semester.

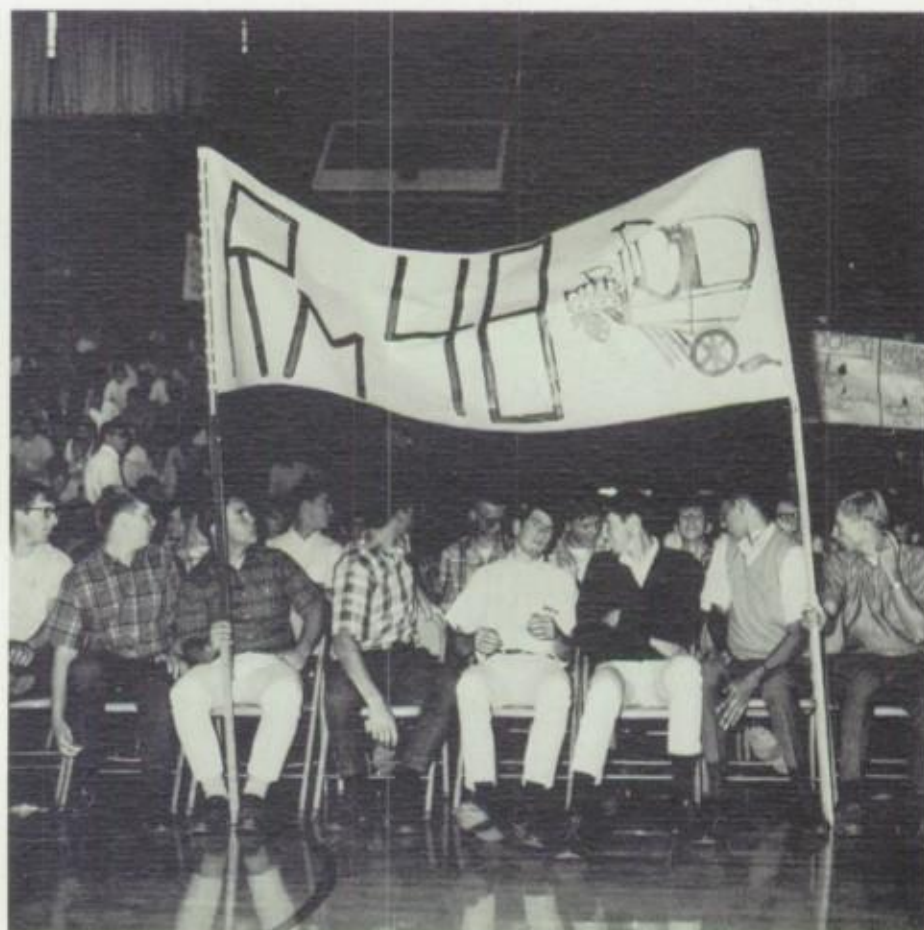

Candidates for the Presidency were: Mike Marx and Doug Leland, with Marx winning in the Final. Marc Tonkovich trounced Jon Sherburne for the office of Vice-President, while Ken Bruya easily defeated write-in candidate, Rob Barnett. John Lollis faced Paul Cane for the job of Treasurer. Lollis won. George Diana defeated Tim Cronin in the race for Frosh Counselor.

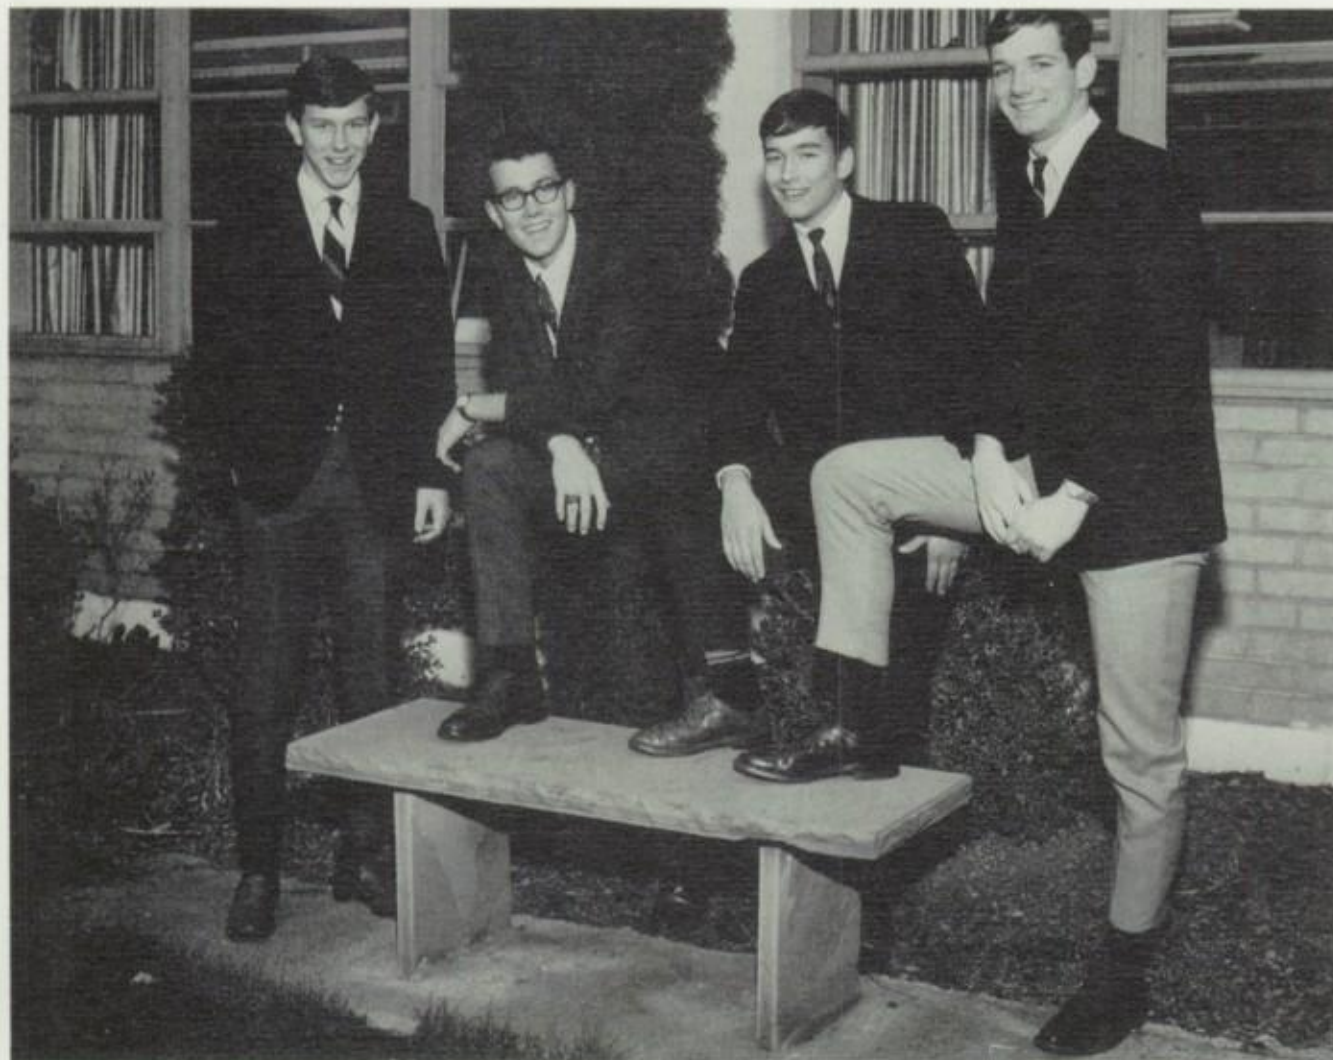

Steve Depner demonstrates for his favorite platform.

The 1968 LUIGIAN, a demonstration of Communication, was longer, larger, and more colorful this year than ever before in its long history.

Editors employed extraordinary backgrounds for the pictures to add a flare of distinction to the yearbook, and centered the book entirely around the student, his interests, and methods of communication among fellow students.

ESPRIT has emerged as an instrument of literary expression, of communication: Prep expressing itself. In order to balance the ESPRIT perspective, Holy Names and Marycliff students have contributed poems, stories and essays. Another dimension was added to the Fall-Winter issue when Gary Taylor, KJRB disc jockey, contributed an editorial on individualism. Mr. Foran was very happy with the quality of literary responses to his plea for creativity and originality. The theme for the first issue was "Am I Anonymous?". 1100 issues were expected to be in circulation each semester.

Gonzagan

It's got to be here somewhere!

With a glossy format, controversial articles, and in-depth news coverage, the GONZAGAN made dramatic advances in its thirty-second year of publication.

The Editors strove to make the paper more relevant to the student and more interesting. Editorials, dealing with school, civic, and national affairs proved that the paper had matured.

The newspaper interested itself and the students in the Viet Nam War, the 1968 election, and the Civil Rights movement. Every part of school life was portrayed in the 1967-1968 GONZAGAN, from the Faculty Flyers to Bobby Kennedy; from voting to senior retreats; from the Dairy Freeze to the Draft; from cheating to the Shrine Game.

Drama

One of the oldest and most deeply refined methods of communication is the stage. At Gonzaga Prep, the scene was light and the message was humor as the Thespians presented two plays during the school year.

"No Time For Sergeants" headed off the year. Dave Moyer starred as Will Stockdale in the fall production, a story of a backward country boy and the havoc he wreaks in the U.S. Army.

The spring comedy-musical was "L'il Abner," starring Jim White as L'il Abner and Kathi Wengeler of Marycliff as Daisy Mae. Girls from Holy Names Academy and Marycliff helped in both plays.

Heading the staff of directors was Fr. Robert Lynch, S.J. Assisting him were Fr. Daniel B. Maher, S.J., who supervised scenery construction for the fall play, and Fr. Laurence Gooley, S.J., musical director.

"Will you see L'il Abner in Washington?"

"Sleeping out with pigs is my line!"

"Guaranteed to stop any human male dead in his tracks!"

Varsity Debate City Champions

Messrs. Ford and Goulet, Moderators: "Now, are we for it or against it?"

Dick Sprague and Mike Marx make up winning team.

Gonzaga's Debate Team, coached by Mr. Lawrence Goulet, S.J., proved this year to be of championship quality. Led by seniors Mike Marx, Dick Roberts, Dave Carroll and Rick Sprague, Gonzaga captured first place in city league competition with a record-making 22 wins against only 2 losses. But the losses came only after the debate squad had set another record by winning 18 straight debates in the first nine matches of the long debate season. Arguing a topic concerning the control of criminal investigation procedures, Prep's Forensic Fighters earned the right to compete in Washington's State Debate Tournament at the end of the year. The debaters also placed well in other speech tournaments held throughout the state.

Prep's Junior Varsity, headed by Mr. Loren Houldson, S.J., placed second in their division with a season record of 17 wins and 7 losses. One pair, Juniors Terry Grant and Jack Loesch, was the only team in a league of some fifty-two teams to complete a perfect season, winning all twelve of their individual league debates.

Jim White, taking first place, gave a talented humorous selection entitled "Friend with a Dog."

Jerry Baldasty, emoting the terrifying story of "Dr. Faustus," was a close second.

In third place, was Mark Rorvig with his gruesome "We Shared." Lance Yohannan, Dave Moyer, Chuck Gordon and Mike Marx were the other finalists.

Food Drive

Despite six weeks exams, Prepsters made the annual Thanksgiving Food Drive a tremendous success of communication and teamwork among themselves on behalf of the less fortunate of Spokane. This year students brought in 30,000 pounds of food for the needy for Thanksgiving Day.

The drive, under the direction of Mr. Doug Perry, S.J. and the Senior Leadership, delivered the food to the poor on the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

As usual the halls were crowded with all of the food that was brought to the locker room area.

Camera Club

Communication can be achieved in many ways. One very creative medium is that of photography. The Camera Club at Prep has excelled this year in exploiting this area of communication. The work of its members is essential to the publications of Gonzaga. The devotion of the club has been invaluable for the GONZAGAN, LUIGIAN, and ESPRIT, especially in the long and tedious hours prior to a year-book deadline or on the night the paper is finished.

The Prep photographers encircled Spokane, following Gonzagans everywhere; from the football games at Albi Stadium and Hart Field to the Civic Theater; from track meets to Glee Club concerts, and countless other events.

Under the direction of Chris Gjording, S.J. the Camera Club greatly aided and served the students of Gonzaga Prep.

Glee Club

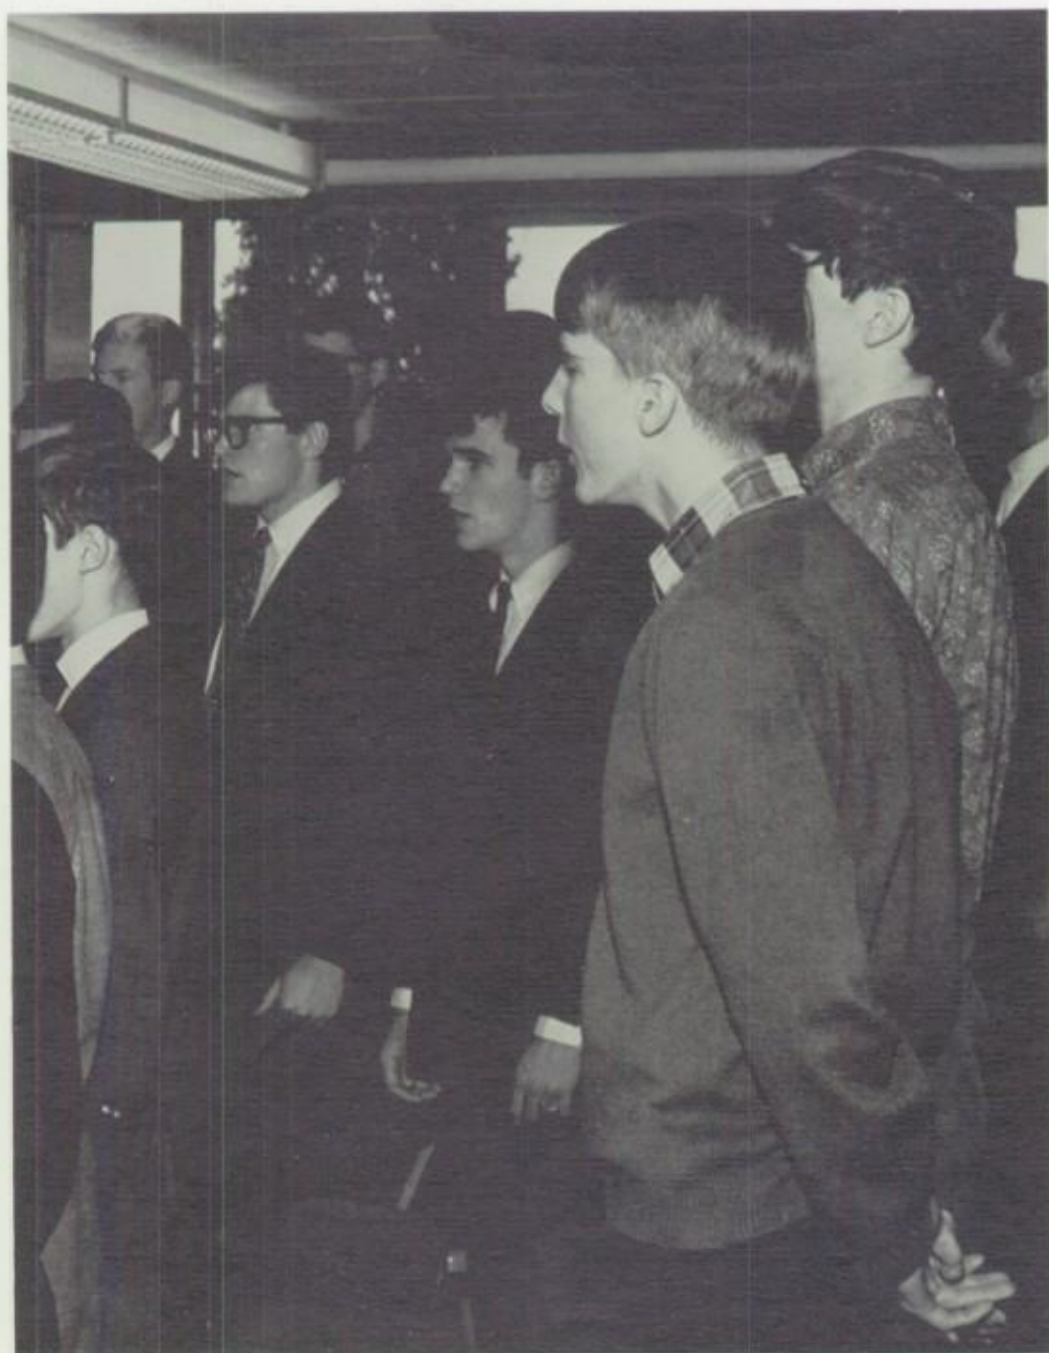

The Gonzaga Prep Glee Club continued to improve upon the gains it made in 1966-1967.

Under the direction of Fr. Lawrence Gooley, S.J., the group staged a multitude of concerts, including Hi Nite, and a joint concert with Marycliff High school in January, featuring "The Creation" by Haydn. Individual numbers by the group varied from Baroque to modern, including a cross section of many interesting and entertaining songs.

Sports

The greatest things we do, we do together, and through Sports the student approaches the limits of communication. The special feeling of the football player, knowing where all the other members of his team are, even though he may never see them in the play; the ultra-sensitivity of the track man to the approach of those running near him; the agonies of conditioning and the boredom of practice become examples and instruments towards a potential knowledge of self that borders on the amazing. The closest friendships and the deepest hates can be made on the playing fields, where the challenge to the team, and to the individuals on the team, must be met, and where the student discovers just how deeply his desires run, and how much he will give to fulfill them.

With twelve returning lettermen, Coach Bill Frazier began his twenty-ninth season as head coach at Gonzaga. Assisting him were Mr. Joseph Waltner, line coach, and Mr. Doug Perry S.J.

The Varsity finished the season third in city standings, with a five win, three loss and one tie record. Twice defeated by City Champs Lewis and Clark, and Zags bowed a third time to Shadle Park High School. In the season finale, played at Rogers Field, the Prepsters tied the Pirates 7-7.

Despite its losses, the team always had the support of the Student Body. Never before has such school spirit been seen at Gonzaga. Even in the last few minutes in a losing game, the cheering sections never gave up, never stopped supporting their team.

The Varsity was picked to play in the Annual Shrine Benefit at the Albi Stadium, pitted against Lewis and Clark. Spirited students demonstrated their loyalty to the team at the pep con culminating Zag Week, a week long activity of room competition and games, and Spirit Day. Before the stunned Shriners the Prepsters continued to cheer. However, the team bowed to Lewis and Clark, 34 - 13.

Mr. Mertens encourages his undefeated "B-Squad."

Under the direction of Coaches James Mertens and William Dobner, the B-Squad completed another winning season and acquired a third straight city football title.

This year saw the twenty-ninth consecutive win for the Zags and Mr. Mertens in his fourth year as B-Squad coach.

One of the closest of all the games was the contest with John Rogers High School. Behind at the half, the Prepsters valiantly fought back to win the game 21 - 15.

For the most part, it was a very lopsided season for the gridders. They inundated North Central 52 - 7 and had a comfortable margin of at least nineteen points in four of their other games. They were unscored upon in one of their games.

One of the bright spots of Prep's athletic season was the Basketball team. In preseason play Gonzaga defeated Pullman, Colville, and Kellogg, while losing only to Richland. League play brought Prep into contact with some of the best teams in the state. Among them was University High, whom we defeated by a score of 59-51. It was their only loss of the season. Gonzaga also qualified for the Christmas Tournament where, after beating Mead, Rogers and WV, we met CV. The game was tension-filled, as the score remained tied until the third quarter when Prep began to fall behind, ending with a score of 44-61.

On the Tuesday after dropping the last league game to Central Valley the Zags met the L.C. Tigers at SCC to break the tie for second place in Division I. G-Prep revenged an earlier loss with a 47-44 victory. The fired-up Bullpups next took on Shadle Park in the Coliseum and again revenged a previous defeat by winning 48-47 to take third in the City League. They then returned to SCC for their third playoff game only to drop reluctantly, 42-29, to the powerful C.V. Bears, who went on to win the State Championship.

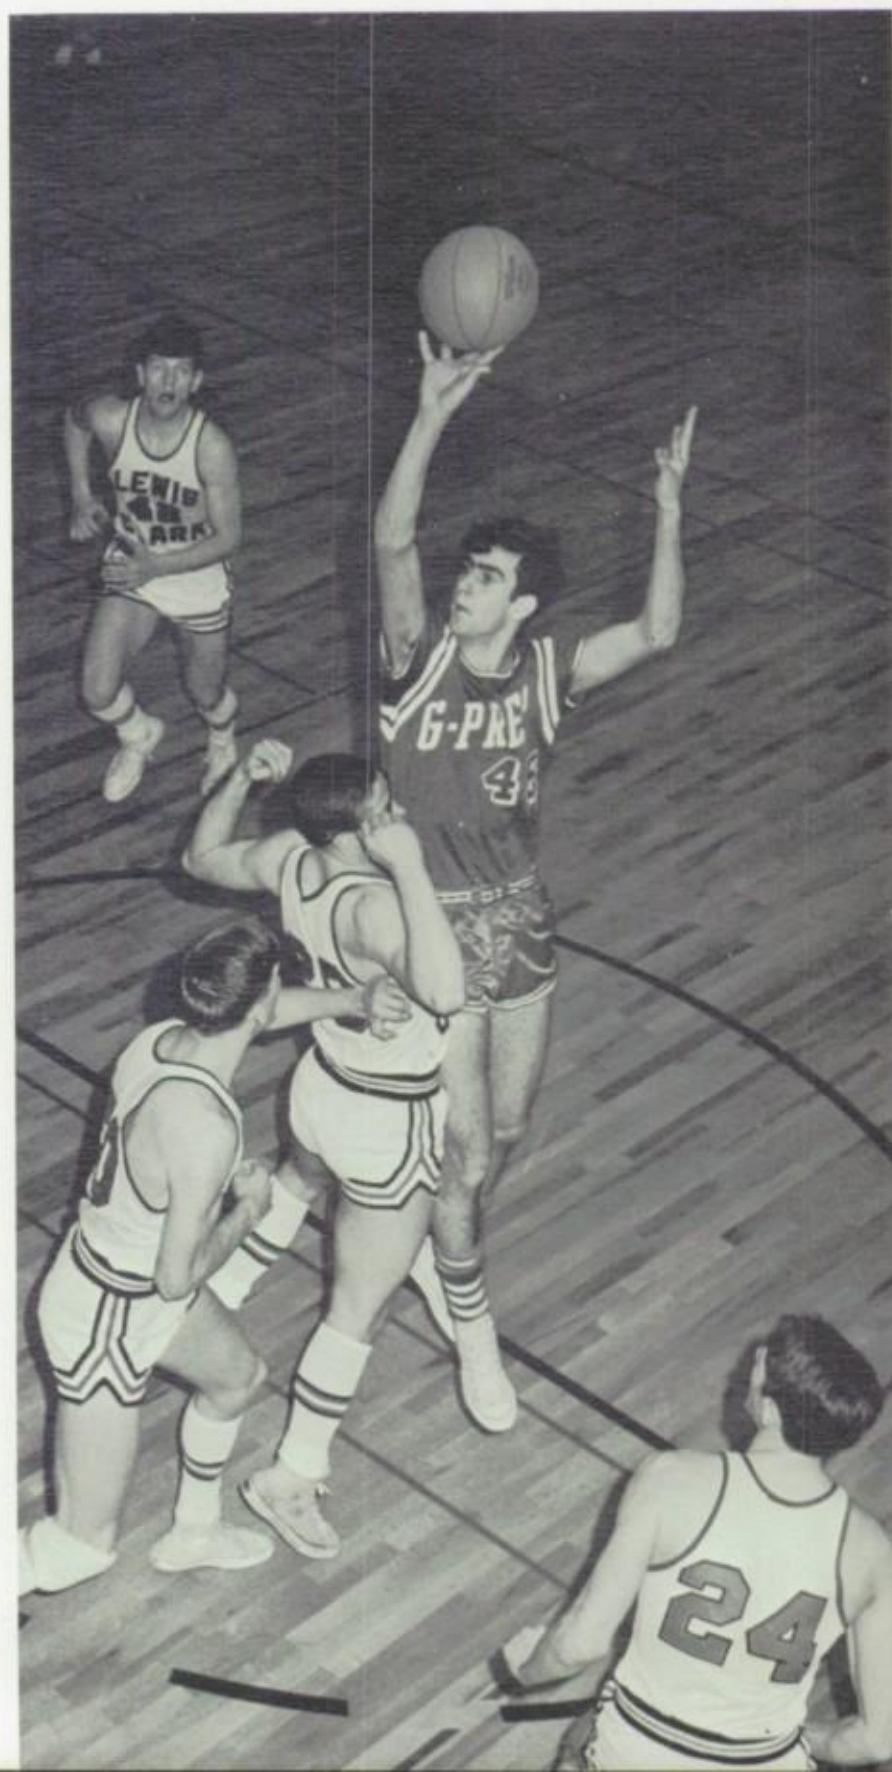

Even though the Bullpups didn't go to State, they took second in their Division, second in the Christmas Tournament and finished third in the Spokane City League. A 15-8 record and three post-season playoff games gave Gonzaga its most successful season in ten years and Coach Clark Irwin, his third consecutive winning season.

PHIL KUDER, a regular for two years, was chosen ALL-CITY for his consistent rebounding and clutch shooting.

JOE PUPO, a standout for three years, was selected 1st string ALL-CITY because of his phenomenal shooting accuracy and superb playmaking. In his senior year Joe averaged nearly 20 points a game and broke the career scoring record for the Spokane City League.

Classes

Each class in a school is different, so that the school itself resounds with the harmony of discord. It is a good sound.

A Junior faces freedom for the first time. Suddenly, almost magically, everyone waits with anxious hopes to give him more of it. Sometimes it hurts to be pulled bodily out of the warm worlds where most of the decisions are made for you. But if the Junior is more free now, he is also more capable of finding at least some answers. This year his goals are truly within reach of his capabilities, and he must decide the course of his new freedom, whether to don the ready-made rules of carelessness and indifference, or to seek out the stonier paths of communication and closer human relationships.

A Sophomore has been plunged into the mainstream of high school life. He begins to understand himself, and vaguely, others in relation to himself. If he is very lucky, he will start to value people not for what they do or seem to be, but merely because they are. It is here that his deepest notions of inter-personal relationships will arise.

To a Freshman, everything is new, so new that he will try to treat it with an awkward familiarity that is often comical. A lot of them are very much afraid, and try to mask their fears with boredom, intolerance, or bravado. But they give most of themselves to everything they try, so that nothing is too good, or too difficult for a freshman.

It's stuck!

Faculty

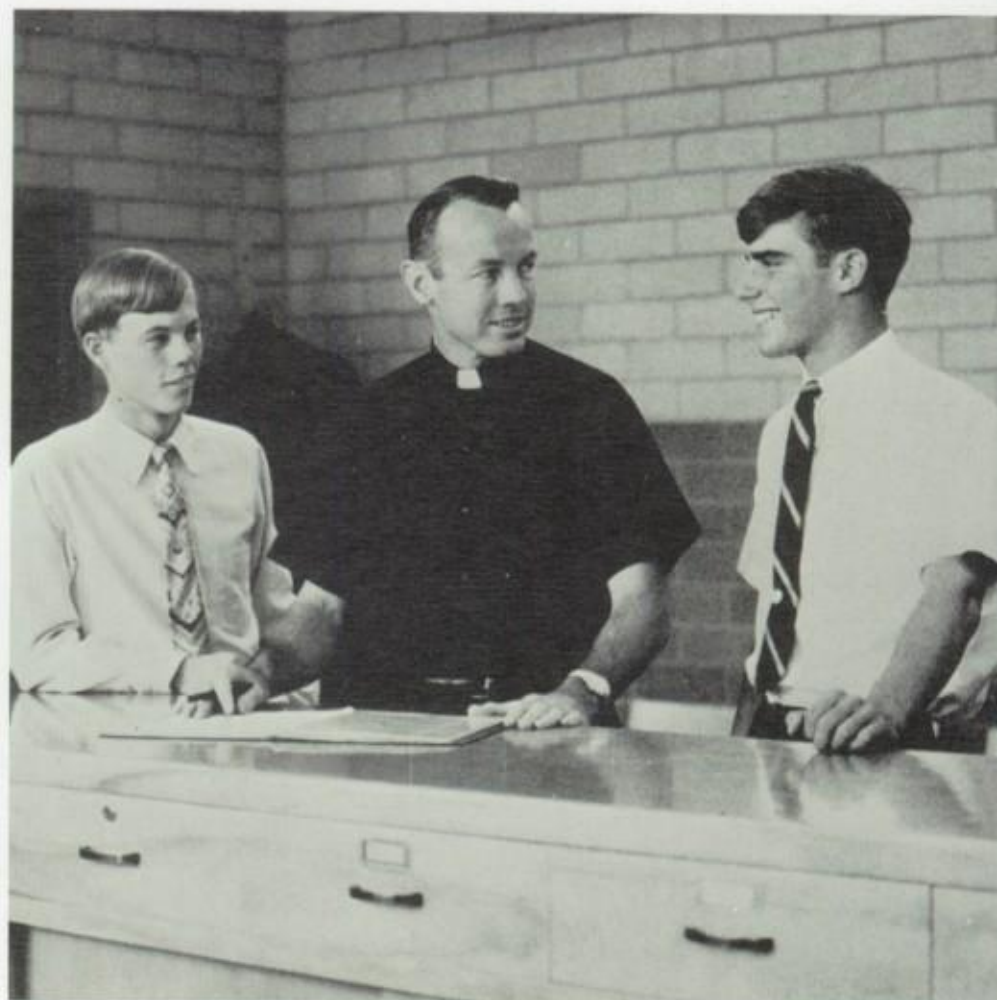

The spirit of communication, and the communication of spirit is the task and responsibility of the Faculty. A high school faculty is one of those rare groups of people, who by some gift of God, are capable of actually shaping the individual personality of each student. It is their job to teach not only facts, but also systems of facts; to teach students how to be comfortable in the modern maze of educational processes which can never end. What they must teach is not so much what to communicate, but how to communicate.

SENIOR CLASS OF 1968

We have been together through these years, sharing each other's accomplishments and problems. But the day of separation has come, and we feel more than a little sad.

Behind us too, are many experiences--helpful, worthwhile and unforgettable. We are about to enter a new world, but we shall have these years to sustain us. Gonzaga Prep is behind us, but it is also before us. We shall never forget.

We the Senior class of 1968 would like to encourage you to set a goal and to strive for it, and do not quit until you have reached it.
